Opportunity for Learning

Borderline Helpline offers training and development to volunteers.
Learn to support others - Develop key skills - Enhance your CV

Borderline is a well-established charitable organisation which provides person-centred telephone support to adults in the Scottish Borders who are experiencing emotional distress.

There are currently volunteering opportunities to join the comprehensive training programme and to become a member of a small, dedicated and experienced team. The nature of the work is both challenging and demanding, and a high level of both motivation and commitment to continuous learning is essential.

The service is open every evening between 7pm and 10pm and is located within Central Borders. Volunteers would, ideally, be able to commit three or four evenings each month. All voluntary positions will be subject to a Basic Disclosure Scotland check. All costs associated with training and volunteering will be met by Borderline.

Funded by Scottish Borders Council and NHS Borders,
Borderline is committed to equality of opportunity in all areas of its work
Scottish Charity No: SC032277
